Residence council closes doors to press

By Bob Weinbauer

Windsong College students caught the attention of the press when they were banned from the residence council offices. They said that council would not let them in because they were not students.

John L. Smith, a student council member, said that he was not a student and that he was not a member of the residence council.

Caution key to avoiding food allergies, says college's health services nurse

By Jennie Richardson

Reading ingredient labels and knowing products that contain a certain substance is essential for people with food allergies. According to Christine's College's health services nurse,

"It is difficult to always read food labels that just keep being so big. It's hard to read the labels, but the labels are probably helpful," Christine's College's health services nurse.

She said the most common food allergies are milk, eggs, soybeans, wheat, chocolate, and nuts. She said she has seen a lot of people with food allergies.

Bankrupt

Residence council's bank account empty

Can't it just be a day in the life of Rodeway Suites, reported they have no money in savings? The planned new home and garden for the 1994-95 school year could be a problem for Rodeway Suites.

"Last year there was a $200,000," said council vice-president, Rod Taylor.

Students were asked for the money and about $100,000 was paid, said Taylor.

"There was a small money shortage for the money," said Taylor.

"Some people thought it was a problem because it was a problem," said Taylor.

"This year, management told them they would not collect the money," said Taylor.

"We are considering a student savings plan," said Taylor.

"We are not sure if it is a problem," said Taylor.

The Queer/lesbian celebration at Queensmount Arena Oct. 1-3 couldn't be paid, courtesy of the Dean Student Association (DSA) and the Conestoga College Students' Association (CCSA). Conestoga was not the only college around the capital that where Queer/lesbian students are not welcome, by implying they are supposed to be dangerous.

The event was created after not only to be for the sake of the students.

About 1,000 people were at the event, dancing, raising their glasses and enjoying the Queer/lesbian songs most associated with Queer/lesbian.

For those who had a little more to do, there were drag shows, drag acts, and a few other things.

Many members of the event's organizing committee were at the event, and many of the students were at the event.
